

The Rockefeller Foundation's LockStep Scenario

Ten years ago, the Rockefeller Foundation published the autocratic LockStep Scenario, and that very scenario became a reality in 2020. The LockStep document described a scenario in which a pandemic would lead to autocratic forms of government with full surveillance and control of citizens. The most recent initiative in this regard is the creation of a biometric ID company named TrustStamp and starting initiatives like the ID 2020.

Ten years ago, various assumptions were made in the LockStep Scenario; here are a few most vital assumptions that match the “pandemic” we are in right now:

- A virus pandemic with high contagion and high mortality
- The failure of the non-authoritarian response of the government
- The approach of the Chinese authoritarian works much better forcing other countries to emulate the Chinese government
- Shocked and scared the public to welcome more surveillance and control
- Biometric ID gets a boost.

Other than the various predictions made 10 years ago, the Rockefeller Foundation has started to work on ID 2020, an initiative to get every world citizen a biometric identity by 2030. Its partners are Microsoft, GAVI, which is the immunization alliance, and Accenture, which is recently working on a traveller digital identity project.

Currently, a biometric digital identity platform that “evolves just as you evolve” is set to be introduced in low income, remote communities in West Africa thanks to the partnership between the GAVI vaccine alliance, Mastercard and Trust Stamp. Trust stamp’s digital identity platform will be integrated into the GAVI-Mastercard and transform the MasterCard into a “Wellness Pass,” a digital vaccination record and identity system that is powered by AI and machine learning technology called NuDate. The coronavirus pandemic might be seen as a deadly virus in the eyes of the public, but it gave the companies and the government an excuse and reason to start to implement these “useful” and “necessary” technologies to track and control us all. Because of the desperate timing and situation, more and more citizens are supportive and willing to accept the concept of control in an attempt to keep us all “safe.” Additionally, the Rockefeller Foundation’s Lockstep scenario predicted that the Chinese government would implement a digital track and health record that is required for citizens to have to enter buildings, parks, workspaces and public spaces in general. The tracking system worked and prevented the spread of the coronavirus perfectly in the past few months and is now receiving attention from western countries. This will become another subterfuge designed to impose the “wellness pass and digital identity” that authorities will refer to in the next few months.

The fear of the public is caused by the biggest misdirection of authorities stating that the virus is more deadly than the annual flu, when in fact, the virus is quite similar to a flu and is under control now. It is important for citizens to do their own research, turn off the television and delete the “News” application on your phones because they are only tools of propaganda.
